Some wounds never heal.

LOGLINE/ SHORT SYNOPSIS

In the 1990s, Ali Boulala is the most fearless and eccentric skateboarder of his generation. After a tragic accident, he discovers that the emotional wounds are the hardest to heal.

LONG SYNOPSIS

Sixteen-year-old Ali Boulala is thrust into the heart of the global skateboarding scene when he is recruited onto a professional crew in the mid-1990s. He spends a decade touring the world with his teammates and living a life without limits. His creativity on the board and his reputation for partying gains Ali the status as the most fearless and eccentric skateboarder of his generation.

Everything changes in 2007 when Ali is involved in a tragic accident. He loses his ability to skate and must fight to build up his life again. Ali now lives a quiet life in the suburbs of Stockholm. He carries scars on his body and in his psyche – constant reminders of the accident that still haunts him. One day, an opportunity opens up for Ali to face his emotional demons head-on. He must decide if he is ready to confront his past, or if some wounds can't be healed.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

When I saw Ali sitting alone in a bar in Stockholm, I remembered hearing about the accident and the death of his best friend, his time in prison, and that he could no longer skate. He did not appear as the same larger-than-life man I knew of. The evidence of the years was visible on his face. The questions started spiraling in my mind: How does he cope with the loss of his best friend? How does he deal with guilt and responsibility? How does he handle losing the ability that has defined him? The film tells the story of Ali's rise and fall, as well as his path toward possible redemption. Archival material shot on a variety of formats chronicling Ali's years as a pro skater forms the base of the film. This material brings in viewers who may not be familiar with Ali and his legacy into the world of his past and introduces them to the central figures in Ali's life during that time. The feel of the film follows the punk ethos of the skate community by combining these collections of disparate scenes from multiple time periods, disparate audio-visual formats (ranging from fish-eyed lenses to Super-8 film stock), to disparate voices and points of view. Through the liveliness of this archival material from a time gone by, we get a vivid picture of what it was like for Ali to live a life without limits, and as such, we come to understand the profoundness of his loss. Slowly, we come to see a person of contradictions emerge: a contemplative, soft-spoken man with a wild past; a destructive perfectionist. The form of the film also takes on this duality through a combination of the high-energy of the past with the state of limbo of the present day.

CAST BIOGRAPHIES

ALI BOULALA (@theboulala) was born in Stockholm, Sweden to a Finnish mother and Algerian father. At 16, he moved to the United States to become a professional skateboarder sponsored by Flip. From an early age, he was characterized as always being the wildest and the craziest of anyone. Even though he no longer skates, he continues to live off of his former wild-child image in order to make a living. The tragedy of Shane's death continues to haunt him, and this grief is something that he carries with him as part of his punishment. Ali currently lives in Stockholm.

SHANE CROSS (@shanecrossforever – tribute page) was an Australian skateboarding prodigy characterized by his pathological aversion to showers and his infectious good humor. He was recruited to the Flip team, joining the world tour as a teen. Younger than many of the other skaters on the team, joining Flip was Shane's opportunity to skate alongside his childhood heroes. While Shane was known for his fun-loving personality, he came into Ali's life at a point when drug and alcohol use on the team had reached a breaking point. Their friendship was a space of light in the ever-darkening chaos of Ali's life. Shane died on March 7, 2007 while riding on the back of Ali's motorcycle while both were heavily intoxicated. The motorcycle hit a curb at 19 mph, throwing them both into a wall. This wall now features a memorial mural in Shane's memory. Shane was only 20 years old when he died.

EWAN BOWMAN (@bo_def_son) is a Scottish skater-turned-videographer who joined the Flip team in 2003. He accompanied the team on world tours in order to capture footage for Flip video productions such as Really Sorry and Extremely Sorry. He also acted as the tour manager, trying to bring order to the chaos of traveling with a van full of young guys who had no real responsibilities in life other than to occasionally skate. Ewan and Ali remain close friends to this day, with Ewan traveling to Stockholm to celebrate Ali's 40th birthday. During this visit, Ewan reveals that Shane's father would like to meet Ali. Ewan currently lives in California.

ARTO SAARI (@artofoto) is a Finnish skateboarder who spent most of his professional career on the Flip team. In 2008, he left the team due to distress over Shane Cross's death. Arto has now been sober for almost 9 years. Arto currently lives in Hawaii.

DUSTIN DOLLIN (@therealdustindollin) is an anarchic Australian skateboarder who started his professional career riding for Baker Skateboards as a teen. He became the "mascot" of a group of skaters (which included Ali) who lived on Warner Avenue at Huntington Beach, California from 1998-2000 and called themselves Piss Drunx. A 2001 Rolling Stone feature about the Piss Drunx described them as "the most dysfunctional degenerates to ever bust an ollie." Dustin currently lives in Paris.

KEVIN "SPANKY" LONG (@kevinspankylong) is an American professional skateboarder and illustrator who joined the Baker team in 2003 as a teenager. During a night of drinking in 2011, a friend lit Kevin's shirt on fire as a joke. The shirt was made of flannel and immediately went up in flames. Kevin suffered third-degree burns on his entire upper body. After escalated drinking and drug use, he is now sober. Kevin currently lives in California.

RUNE GLIFBERG (@runeglifberg) is a Danish skateboarder who turned pro at age 18 in 1992, riding for Flip. Now in his mid-40s, Rune will compete in the Tokyo Olympics (scheduled for 2021). This is the first time skateboarding is included as a competitive Olympic sport. Rune currently lives in Copenhagen.

ERIK ELLINGTON (@erikellington) is an American professional skateboarder and co-founder of Baker Skateboards. Now sober, he was also a founding member of the Piss Drunx. Eric currently lives in California.

ALEX MOUL (@moulyalx) is a UK-born skater who became a pro at age 12. He and Ali were the original tenants at the Warner Avenue apartment in Huntington Beach. Alex currently lives in California.
